RURAL MAIL CARRIERS

WERE WATER-BOUND

Mr. A. L. Sutton and Horse Came Near Drowning and Lost His Buggy and Mail.

The rural mail carriers out of Bryan are having troubles of their own. The floods have put them to the bad and consequently their patrons are minus their daily mail.

All the carriers started out on their routes this morning, but by 11 o'clock they began coming back one at a time, and at 3 o'clock this afternoon all were back except the carriers of No. 2 and No. 4. It is supposed they succeeded. The others encountered swollen streams that were impossible to cross, and there was nothing for them to do but return.

While Mr. A. L. Sutton, carrier of No. 6, was returning to town from his trip late yesterday afternoon, happened to a serious misfortune that came near costing the lives of himself and horse. He drove into Bryan branch, one and a half miles northeast of town, and found it swimming. His horse was washed down and was about to drown when Mr. Sutton jumped from the buggy and with great difficulty cut him loose from the buggy, enabling him to swim out. Mr. Sutton then swam to safety himself, but had to leave his buggy, mail, stamps and everything else. He went back this morning and recovered everything, but they were in a terribly soaked condition. It is believed, however, they can be dried out so the mail can be delivered and the stamps used.

Humanizing Houses.

Houses are curious things. We take a morsel of limitless space and wall it in and roof it over. Suddenly it ceases to be part of God's out of doors and becomes an entity with an atmosphere of its own. We warm it with our fires, we animate it with our affections, we furnish it with such things as seem good in our eyes. We do this to get shelter for our bodies, but we acquire as well an instrument for our spirits that reacts on us in its turn.

In other words, as we live our way into a house, adapting it to our need, the bricks and mortar, the paint and plaster, cease to be inert matter and become alive. Superficial sociologists have taunted women with being "more anabolic or plantlike" than man, but I count it her second glory. The plant is an organism that "slowly turns lifeless into living matter," and this is the thing that woman has done from the beginning with her shelter. In our houses we achieve almost an organic extension of our very selves.—Cornelia A. P. Comer in Atlantic.

Husband and Wife.

Husband means house bound; wife, weaving one; son is the cleaner; daughter is the milker; spinster is the unmarried sister of husband or wife, who is the spinner.

Anagrams.

The anagram, or transposition of the letters in words or sentences, was much in vogue in Greece in the olden times. The Caballists, or Jewish doctors, thought that the anagram always pointed out a man's destiny, and if his name written backward or transposed in any way spelled a word with meaning they firmly believed it a revelation. The flatterers of James I. of England proved his right to the British monarchy as the descendant of the mythical King Arthur from his name, Charles James Stuart, which becomes "claims Arthur's seat." The best anagrams are those which have in the new order of letters some signification appropriate to that from which they are formed. When Pilate asked "Quid est veritas?" (What is truth?) he probably had no idea that his question answered itself, but it did. The transposition made it, "Est vir qui adest" (It is the man who is here). Anagrams were written as early as 250 B. C., and their name comes from the Greek words ana (backward) and gramma (writing).
